A: ServerAlias might be what you're looking for. Example: ServerAlias domain.com www.domain.com Note that you can also use fully qualified domain names in the ServerAlias statement. This is useful if you have a hosts file where you can't resolve the domain. In this case, you might have something like the following: ServerAlias example.com *.example.com The ServerAlias directive will override the virtual host defined on the server-configuration for the domain you've specified. You can't use ServerAlias with the standard directive, though. A: 1d6a3396d6
