Software is a valuable asset of any company or individual. Often, it is the only valuable asset. Protection of these valuable assets from unauthorized access, theft and loss is critical. One way to protect your software assets is to mark your executable file as a watermark. A watermark is a kind of computer virus or malware embedded into a program file. When an executable is executed, the watermark is visible on the screen. Software Watermark Vulnerability: Watermarking a software file allows you to get an image or text added to your executable file. When you have a watermark and a need to protect your software, it can be difficult to sell your program. Since you are adding a watermark to your software, you are basically branding your software. If the watermark is visible, it lets the buyer know that they are getting the original product. Additionally, if you have watermarked your software, you can generate revenue from your software. It helps you to show that you are the author of your program. Software Watermark Tool: Software Watermark is a watermarking tool that creates a watermark and is available for both 32-bit and 64-bit Windows applications. In case of any problems, update it. The present invention relates to a capacitance type acceleration sensor which is capable of detecting an acceleration by detecting a change in capacitance of a movable electrode. One of conventional capacitance type acceleration sensors is shown in FIGS. 1 and 2. In this conventional acceleration sensor, a movable electrode 2 having a diaphragm-like shape is fixedly secured to a case 1, and a fixed electrode 3 is formed on the bottom surface of the case 1 to be opposed to the movable electrode 2. The movable electrode 2 is elastically supported by a thin support pin 5 and a spring 4. The acceleration to be detected is applied to the movable electrode 2, and the movement of the movable electrode 2 is detected as a change in capacitance of the movable electrode 2 and the fixed electrode 3, thereby to detect the acceleration. However, the above-mentioned conventional acceleration sensor detects the acceleration only on one axis, i.e., the direction of the applied acceleration. Therefore, if the acceleration applied to the movable electrode 2 is not on the vertical axis but is on a horizontal axis in FIG. 1, an error in the detected acceleration is caused by a change in posture of the acceleration sensor. For example, an acceleration is applied to the acceleration sensor 1d6a3396d6
