Working with flags If you've ever looked at a photograph and wondered about the details that were changed, you've probably been using a different program to achieve that effect — the Windows Paint program, perhaps, or the PhotoDraw program, or a photo-retouching program. The Photoshop program contains a feature called flags that enables you to change an image in various ways without having to use the layer-based editing system. Some of the creative techniques that you can apply to a photograph with flags involve

- * Changing individual colors of a picture.
- * Moving a picture around on the screen.
- * Creating special types of effects in layers.

To make things a little easier, Adobe's Photoshop Elements also has a flags feature, but it is limited to a few basic effects. For more on the Elements editing tools, see Chapter 14.

Tag Archives: Death Waiting for Death: Death of a Gifted Engineer (Narcissus Books, 2014) by Robin Spano Robin Spano's Waiting for Death (Harvard University Press, 2009) was required reading for my creative writing class. I read it twice and learned a lot of things— mainly that stories can be self-referential and that the mind is a kind of private place and that the mind knows things. Do you think I'm a weirdo, or do you think this book is mind-blowing? I'm not sure what to make of it. "The two young lovers lie in a field of wildflowers and listen to the wind in the pines. The wind is picking up, and Lucie, the girl, starts to remember. The scene is peaceful, almost asleep. It's late spring. The young man is spending the day with her. As night falls, they lie in the field and enjoy the evening. He holds his hand over the hand she holds over his. Silence and silence. You feel it. Eventually the air stirs as the wind rises. The clock ticks past midnight. Now Lucie can feel the air. She knows the air is cold. She doesn't like the air. It isn't the night in spring. It isn't the calm. The wind is coming from the north. It is autumn." Wait, this is a new book? "I think of it that way," she explained. "It really is the space between. I also think it's a novel written in the form of an essay." When I got this book I immediately did a web search. It's a family memoir about a mother and daughter, almost a memoir about the problems of having a mother and daughter. I loved this excerpt for one reason: it was about Death. "I think we're like dolphins," she said as she drove into Atherton. The car was quiet. I could feel the panic welling in her. "We're born with the instinct to move along the coast and back. We are born to become one. But we never do. We go back to the sea and wait for her." My heart was beating fast. My daughter said that the space between was the

The present invention relates to a new and distinct cultivar of Dahlia plant botanically known as Dahlia hybrida and hereinafter referred to by the cultivar name 'Brisdarpuff'. The new cultivar originated in a controlled breeding program in Arroyo Grande, Calif. during February 2002. The objective of the breeding program was the development of Dahlia cultivars with a unique flower color and a mounding-trailing growth habit. The new Dahlia cultivar is the result of cross-pollination. The female (seed) parent of the new cultivar is the proprietary Dahlia cultivar designated 'D203', U.S. Plant Pat. No. 11,829, characterized by its dark purple-colored inflorescences, medium green-colored foliage, and moderately mounded-trailing growth habit. The male (pollen) parent of the new cultivar is the proprietary Dahlia cultivar designated 'D471', U.S. Plant Pat. No. 13,491, characterized by its medium pink-colored inflorescences, light green-colored foliage, and moderately mounded-trailing growth habit. The new cultivar was discovered and selected as a single flowering plant within the progeny of the above stated cross-pollination during June 2003 in a controlled environment in Arroyo Grande, Calif. Asexual reproduction of the new cultivar by terminal stem cuttings since June 2003 in Arroyo Grande, Calif. and West Chicago, Ill. has demonstrated that the new cultivar reproduces true to type with all of the characteristics, as herein described, firmly fixed and retained through successive generations of such asexual propagation.

Q: Office 365 REST API - Single API for all tenant (Optional) I am writing an application that will use Office 365 services (Mail/Cal, Graph, Excel,...). At the moment I need to store access token and refresh token in local storage. I need to get access token and refresh token manually and after I send REST requests. This is ugly and not a best practice. Is there any possibilities to get OAuth2 tokens from Office 365, for all tenants, via REST API and not via browser o login? I have read, that for MS Graph one option exists - there is an MS Graph service which returns tokens for Microsoft and user's tenant. But it doesn't seem like the same thing with others. A:
