In each survey there is a section of the survey that is used to generate random numbers. Currently these random numbers are generated every time a survey is run. How would I document this method for generating random numbers with a @see, @test or @automated annotation? In Java I would expect something like this: @Test public void testGenRandomNumber() { List values = new RandomGenerator().generateRandomValues(); assertEquals(values.size(), 1); assertEquals(values.get(0), 1); } That was only an example, the method is a bit more complicated. A: The Google Guava library has the Generators.random method that makes this possible with type-safe random values: public class Generators { public static class RandomGenerator implements Generator { // Blocked version of the generator to wait when it produces too many values. BlockedGenerator blockedGenerator; @Override public Integer nextValue() { if (bl
